Year-End Support from CPAs like you

FHB's Approach

We'll ensure you meet your deadlines, but that's the least of what we offer. Working with FHB means nothing is left to chance. You'll understand immediately that we've done this hundreds of times; you can relax knowing that you have the industry's best team on your side.

Independent CPAs with government experience

Our CPAs have worked in government finance departments and as public sector auditors for decades. We understand ACFR thoroughly and are GFOA ACFR-award reviewers.

A solution for this year-end & many to come

Not only will our team assist you with your year-end, making sure you meet your deadlines; while doing so, they'll also improve your processes, increase automation, and reduce the time and risk of error for all future year-ends.

Leave nothing to chance

Over the last 25 years, our team has completed 1000+ projects for more than 700 clients. We have the experience and tools to ensure a successful project.

Technology experts

Our team has decades of experience implementing, training and supporting Workiva in Canadian and US local governments.

3 Reasons not to use your auditor for year end preparation:

You could contact your auditor for help, but you shouldn't. Why?

1 Auditors must be independent

Having the auditor prepare your year-end and resulting financial statements, then audit those same statements, is what AICPA Rule 101 on Independence precisely cites as a "Self-Review Threat" to independence.

2 Auditors are not technology experts

As CPAs, auditors can help with your workload, but that's all. Demand more — CPAs with the technological know-how to not only help with your workload but simultaneously leverage your current technology investments to maintain or improve the ROI they provide.

3 Auditors are a stopgap solution

Contracting auditors to assist with your year-end will get you out of a tight squeeze, this time. They don't improve processes, upgrade your graphic design, ensure you qualify for the GFOA ACFR award or make similar enhancements.
